No Juggling With Words or Figures !

Every article advertised stands for genuine worth-there isn't a trashy or inferior piece of merchandise in the stock. It must have character and give service, or we wouldn't give it stock room. Our conscientious business policy and guarantee for selling only reliable, trustworthy apparel that will give the full measure of satisfaction stands at the back of each and every assertion herein contained. We again reiterate the statement that it matters not how cheaply the prices are advertised, the grade of material is of standard manufacture and represents intrinsically all or more than the selling prices charged. Some of these specials were not gotten without great and persevering effort—none without keen and skilful business strategy—for they are the very best values of their kind, notwithstanding the phenomenal bargain prices we put on them.

WILL SAIL TO THE ORIENT, THENCE AROUND THE WORLD.

He Describes His Craft and Explains to Landsmen How He Has Learned to Sleep Calmly While Death is

(Correspondence of the Dispatch.) SAN FRANCISCO, March 27 .- None but the most barren of rocky islands would prevent Captain Adolph Frietsch, now in this city, from returning to civilization, were that venturesome mariner cast, like Robinson Crusoe, on an uninhabited spot out of the track of ships. Given a few feet of timber, and the free use of his skilful hands, and Freitsch would laugh at the efforts of the waves to keep him prisoner. He has proved his ability to build a boat that will carry him across thousands of miles of stormy ocean, serenely contented in the vast desolation of the sea, and as satisfied of his safety as though walking down the main avenue of his native city. Success in this direction has made Freitsch ambitious to do more to the Philippines, and thence around the world, in a little craft that he is cutting and hammering into shape in this city. I found him busily engaged in building his boat when I sought him out, and inquired as to his plans for the lonely expedition to our new possessions in the East.

"I arrived here a week ago," he said, in answer to my questions, "and laid the keel of my boat a few days later. I have not yet quite decided when I shall start "I arrived here a week ago," he said, in answer to my questions, "and laid the keel of my boat a few days later. I have not yet quite decided when I shall start for Manila, but it will be some time toward the end of March. My boat will be, when finished, 24 feet water line, 32 feet over all, 9 feet beam, 3 feet 6 inches depth of hold, and 5 feet depth of cabin, which I shall build the whole width of her amidship. She will look like this, when

And the square-jawed sallor, who was going to prove its independence of transportation companies by building his own ship, drew the sketch that I send you, showing the kind of craft which he instends to sail, single-handed, across the Pacific Ocean and around the world. The barometer is high, no squalls to be afraid of. I feel like sleep-pacific Ocean and around the world. The barometer is high, no squalls to be afraid of. I feel like sleep-ing; well, then, get her in sleeping trim. I slack off my main sheet, so that the mainsail merely stands full when the boat is on her course. Then, if she takes where I shall make a stay of two weeks. I shall then try to get to Manila within forty-two days. I shall, of course, be perfectly alone. The boat will be all one man's work to handle, but I can manage it. The canyas will consist of mainsail, lug foresail, storm jib, balloon jib, main gag, topsail, and fore gaff topsail. To attend to this amount of canvas will take all my time, but I am an old hand at the business, and feel sure I can steer the boat safely into Manila harbor.

"I have been asked by the doubting ones how I manage to sleep on a lonely sea voyage such as that on which I am soon to embark. It is no wonder that people don't understand how I do it, for "Without that knowledge, don't attempt to venture out on the ocean alone, because the consequences will be that you will, in the lucklest case, be picked up exhausted or raying mad. Learn, first, how to sleep under the most difficult circomstances. And you must not only learn to sleep, but you must also learn how to wake up; yes, wake up at any cer tain time you set your mind on, or at any time snything is about to go wrong. I slept in the little boat on which I made row, crowded waters, like the American lakes and the Irish Sea, I slept with her standing in for shore which I knew she As i would reach in a certain time. a notion to luff up, the mainsall will shake, and wake me up. On the other hand, if she is inclined to come off, the mainsail will fill out, and the headsalis will lose their wind. She will not come very far. Besides, there is a different rolling to her; instead of rolling sideways, she begins to dip up and down. In either case, I shall soon be out and steady But there is not always a breeze abeam;

sometimes the wind might blow as the course lays. If so, I shall not steer the course. I keep her a couple of points off, keep the wind over the quarter, and then, if the breeze is stiff, I take the mainsail off her, letting her go for the head sails, and, by keeping my centreboard lifted to a position that experience has shown to be best under the circumstances, I man-age, also, now to make her travel by herself, although I might have to take my sleep in shorter spells, and might be dis-turbed more frequently. "Out on the wide Atlantic, in fine, clear weather, and with a steady breeze, I used to take my sleep in two-hour naps, wake up regularly, just take a look at the wea-ther, sails and compass, and be back in the bunk again, losing but little time. At slept in the little boat on which I made a former trip under all kinds of circumish waters, with baffling winds, and stances. I slept with her sailing in naramong other craft, I would turn out twenty minutes to take a peep

As I looked at the weather-beaten face of the man who taiked so calmly of sleep-ing on the ocean while his little craft sail-ed blindly along. I began to realize that the old Viking spirit was still very much alive. Captain Freitsch is, in fact, a de-scendant of the Viklings, and comes by his lenty, and slept good, but with good udgment always."

"But how could you? What would the probable that incoming skippers will report having seen Captain Freitsch's small craft, after he has been a few days at sea, and some will go out of their way to rescue a supposedly-shipwrecked mariner. Freitsch says he always has a hard time of it eluding the kindly attempts of the larger vessels to "rescue him."

thusiasm into the plan for the erection of a new place of worship. The plans, which have been drawn by Mr. W. C. West, an architect of this city, have been accepted by the official board, and the matter will be brought up in the conference to be held this week.

For some time past Rev. J. T. Routten, pastor of the church, and the members have been anxious to build a new church, and this desire has broadened into a large enthusiasm. The ladies of the church have organized a league for the purpose of raising the necessary funds, and have elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Robert Gaulding; Secretary, Mrs. James Blair; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Urginia Gaulding; Treasurer, Mrs. L. The league will meet April 12th at the residence of Mrs. Julia Parish, 2818 Seventh street, at 3 P. M. Contributions, will be thankfully received.

The old building will be moved to the rear of the lot and used as a Sanday, school room and chapel. The new auditorium is to be about 50 feet square, and will have circular seats. The choir will be located in an alcove specially provided for it in front of the audience and to the left of the pulpit. The ceiling will be ornamented with heavy scroll work and mouldings inside, and will be ceiled.
